

MOUNTAIN LIVING®

Spring Fever

FRESH DESIGN IN
PARK CITY, COEUR D'ALENE
AND WHITEFISH

+

MOUNTAIN BUILDERS AT THE TOP
KITCHEN REFINEMENT ON THE RANGE
A CRAFTSMAN-STYLE GUESTHOUSE

SHAKEN, NOT STIRRED

STORY JAMES FARRELL

DESIGNING INTERIOR
COCKTAILS
WITH TINEKE TRIGGS

Tineke Triggs' interiors are never the same twice. She cultivates a melting pot of ideas to meet each client's specific needs. "All my projects are the self-expression of the client," says Triggs. >>

Design Mixology, featuring the interiors of Tineke Triggs, showcases an astonishing breadth of work.

Each project is more beautiful than the last, and every last one is unique. The secret is in the book's title, which comes from one of the designer's friends. "She said I'm a design mixologist," recalls Triggs. "Constantly mixing and matching things to design the perfect cocktail." The result is a rich tapestry of aesthetics, artfully combined into a new dream home on every page.

Triggs herself is many things. She's a first-generation American born in Northern California to immigrants from Holland and Scotland. Dyslexic, she found refuge in art early on and discovered a talent for math in high school. She put herself through college and later pursued careers in finance and tech, which taught her to manage teams, timelines and budgets like few others. She found her >>

LEFT: The clients for this Martis Camp home were open to playful colors, so Triggs incorporated reds in this living space to balance the rich natural greens outside.

RIGHT: Triggs used lighter wood accents to keep this home bright while honoring the classic Tahoe aesthetic. The homeowners' colorful, modern art collection fit perfectly.